Moririn launched its business over 350 years ago, starting out as a cotton broker also involved in sales of cotton thread and textiles. Ever since, determined to live up to its founding mission of “contributing to more prosperous lifestyles,” the company has remained firmly committed to turning out fine-quality materials, the proven cornerstone of any textile manufacturer. Toward that end, we have channeled the full measure of our energies into the development of original materials.

Today, Moririn mobilizes personnel keenly versed in all stages of textile operations, from spinning to weaving, knitting, dyeing, and sewing, thereby advancing an impressive scope of business activities. As a “general textiles trading company” also possessing manufacturer functions, we stand out on the strength of a supply system capable of expertly addressing customer demands from the upstream through downstream sectors. Moririn has also expanded its business to the overseas front on the power of expertise in broad-ranging business domains and stellar specialization.

We have set up production and logistics hubs both domestically and overseas, and thereby established a proprietary supply chain management (SCM) system that covers everything from the development and production of materials to the planning and production of goods, as well as enabling thorough quality control and logistics management. This SCM system links Japan with China and ASEAN nations, and allows us to offer optimal services in each location. Furthermore, we are increasing our scope of activity overseas by engaging in sales of sewing threads, car seat fabrics, and more in China and ASEAN nations, and expanding our transactions with companies in the US and Europe.

Although the textile industry is experiencing great change, we at Moririn see this as an opportunity to demonstrate our endeavor, and we will aim for increased sales through proactive sales activities and strategic investments. Not only that, we will look for inspiration in our roots to improve the quality of our proposals, while also placing a separate focus on personnel development and the creation of a comfortable workplace for our employees. Our business environment is drastically changing, and it dictates that sustainable growth will not be possible through conventional methods, and thus we must take it upon ourselves to adjust. In order to provide comprehensive support to our customers, we will reorganize our structure into six business groups, and in turn push forward a highly mobile business structure. As a general textiles trading company, Moririn is determined to lead the industry with even greater originality over the years to come, sparing no time or effort to excel as a best company capable of swiftly supplying new added value to our customers.
